

COLOR SLIDE NO

DESCRIPTION OF MATERIAL

- BO-6 Same locale as BO-4 and 5, but looking toward the west. East zone is across the fence on left. Picture taken in January 1954. ✓
- BO-7 Leaving Haidt on the road to Hof. The iron curtain fence and plow strip are visible on the right. Picture is looking east. The fence turns here and ends right beyond the field of the picture. From there on, only a plowed strip divides the zones. Picture taken in January 1954. ✓
- BO-9 At the Toepen border, showing the River Saale and plowed strip. A bridge over the Saale may be seen in the distance. On right of the bridge is the west zone. On left of the bridge, the east zone. Picture taken in January 1954. Toepen is a small village about 12 kilometers north of Hof. ✓
- BO-10 A view of the east zone beyond the bridge seen in BO-9. Note the east zone road check point. Picture taken in January 1954.
- BO-11 Old mill near the village of Moedlareuth across the east zone border. Mill windows are bricked up. Picture taken in January 1954. Moedlareuth is about 10 kilometers northeast of Hof. ✓
- BO-12 Spot in the village of Moedlareuth where the mill was torn away. Picture taken in January 1954. ✓
- BO-13 Moedlareuth, showing how village is cut in two by the iron curtain (the board fence). Picture is looking east from the west sector of the village. The fence is eight feet high. Picture taken in January 1954. ✓
- BO-14-17 (15) Same scene as BO-13 but in progressively closer views. January 1954. BO 14-16 accessioned ✓
- BO-18 Looking across border at Moedlareuth, showing two German Communist border police, armed. Until recently, this area was patrolled by Soviet troops. January 1954. ✓
- BO-20 Looking south into east zone from bombed bridge on main autobahn to Berlin from Hof. Picture was taken northwest of the village of Hirschberg which is northwest of Hof on the River Saale. Note plowed strip dividing the zones and the place where farmhouse was torn away by the Communists to provide clear visibility. January 1954. ✓
- BO-21 State operated tannery in the east zone of Germany at Hirschberg. Tannery was formerly owned by the Fritz Knoch estate. It was the largest in Europe before World War II. Now operating at much below capacity. Also used as Communist observation post. The river in foreground is the Saale. Bridge has been torn out by Communists. January 1954. ✓
- BO-22 Butt of bridge on Munich-Berlin Highway, looking toward the east zone. This is the Saale river near Hirschberg. January 1954. ✓

COLOR SLIDE NO.

DESCRIPTION OF MATERIAL

BO-24	Plowed strip along the Saale river, looking north from bridge in BO-22. No fence here. The river is the border of the Knoch farm, and the shed in the picture is on the Knoch farm in the west zone. January 1954. ✓
BO-25	Large farm across the Saale from the Fritz Knoch estate, near Hirschberg. The picture looks northwest into the east zone. The farm is desolate and all buildings are bricked up. January 1954. ✓
BO-26	Another view of BO-25 taken from a little to the left. January 1954. ✓
BO-28	Site of the former German Museum in the East Sector of Berlin. The large sign bears propaganda which reads "1954 the year of the big initiative". Picture taken in January 1954. (✓)
S-5	The old Hitler Chancellory after destruction. In the East Sector of Berlin. This picture was taken in February 1951, but the author of the picture saw the site again in January 1954 and states it looks exactly the same. No changes were visible.
S-25	Communist headquarters in the East Sector of Berlin. February 1951.
S-29	Two Soviet soldiers standing before the Russian memorial in the British zone. February 1951.

- e n d -

Approved For Release 1999/09/10 : CIA-RDP83-00423R001400990005-3

Approved For Release 1999/09/10 : CIA-RDP83-00423R001400990005-3

100-100-14

Approved For Release 1999/09/10 : CIA-RDP83-00423R001400990005-3

Bo 28

12

Approved For Release 1999/09/10 : CIA-RDP83-00423R001400990005-3

Approved For Release 1999/09/10 : CIA-RDP83-00423R001400990005-3

Bo 4

6

see Bow-1

Approved For Release 1999/09/10 : CIA-RDP83-00423R001400990005-3